

Subdividing the city

Our “residential” and “commercial” regions are not pure, there is some cross contamination of each.

Identifying patterns of behavior

These light curves are reasonably unordered, but is there a discernible pattern hidden in the data?

For example, what if we were to order them according to their “final” off transition?